

The consolidation of ownership of broadcast and print media has homogenized the news and entertainment industries' output. I am particularly concerned that the news media now seems to speak with one voice, and that voice is one of support for one side of the political spectrum, with considerable editorial slant, rather than the more unbiased and balanced presentation of news that was typical a mere decade ago.

There needs to be much more competition between print and electronic media as well as within each segment. This requires a return to strict regulatory limits placed on the number and types of media outlets any individual, corporation, or de facto holding company may own or control through proxy or other means.
